

Al Andalus University

For Medical Sciences

Prof. Mohamed Amer Mardini

- Personal Information:

Name: Mohamed Mardini

Mobile: +963944355883

Email: mm@au.edu.sy

Languages: German – English

- Qualifications:

- BSc in Pharmacy & Pharmaceutical Chemistry, Damascus University, Syria (1982).

- PhD in Pharmacy University of Humboldt, Germany (1988).

- Publications & Scientific work:

- Professor in the Department of Pharmacy Damascus University
- Al-Andalus University for Medical Sciences.
- Head of Academic Program, the Agency for Excellence & Creativity, Damascus, Syria.
- Supervised several Msc and PhD students and participated in several committees.
- Published more than forty scientific papers in national and international journals.
- Participated in several national and international scientific conferences

- The vision:

“Affiliation is the key for success & development”

Prospects of the qualifying program for postgraduate studies

Affiliation

Affiliation is an overwhelming feeling that arises with the individual since birth. It passes through stages of development beginning with affiliation to family, school, village, city, institution and finally homeland.

Human need for affiliation increases with the need to feel safe and secure, especially during crises. The strongest affiliation is to oneself, the conscious ego. However, it is possible that other affiliations may be stronger, such as affiliation to religion, clan or homeland. Different affiliations may often overlap and may be reduced or increased according to situations and circumstances.

Affiliation is part of the values' framework of society and therefore, teaching and learning has the greatest impact on promoting national affiliation.

Prof. Mohammed. A. Mardinin